ORIGIN OF MASONRY.

FROM the commencement of the World we may trace the foundation of Masonry. Ever since symmetry began, and harmony displayed her charms, our order has had a being.

During many ages, and in many different countries, it has flourished. No art, no science preceded it. In the dark periods of antiquity, when literature was in a low state, and the rude manners of our forefathers withheld from them that knowledge we now so amply share, Masonry diffused its influence. This science unveiled, arts arose, civilization took place, and the progress of knowledge and philosophy gradually dispelled the gloom of ignorance and barbarism. Government being settled, authority was given to laws, and the assemblies of the Fraternity acquired the patronage of the great and the good, while the tenets of the profession diffused unbounded philanthropy.

Abstracted from the pure pleasures which arise from friendship so wisely constituted as that which subsist among Masons, and which is scarcely possible that any circumstance or occurrence can erase, Masonry is a science confined to no particular country, but extends over the whole terrestrial globe. Wherever the arts flourish, there it flourishes too.

Add to this, that by secret and inviolable signs, carefully preserved among the fraternity it becomes an universal language. Hence, many advantages are gained. The distant Chinese, the wild Arab, and the American savage, will embrace a brother Briton, and know that besides the common ties of humanity, there is still a stronger obligation to induce him to kind and friendly offices.

The spirit of the fulminating priest will be tamed, and a moral brother, though of a different persuasion, engage his esteem; for mutual toleration in religious opinions is one of the most distinguishing and valuable characteristics of the craft. As all religions teach morality, if a brother be found to act the part of a truly honest man, his private speculative opinions are left to God and himself. Thus, through influence of Masonary, which is reconcilable to the best policy, all those disputes which embitter life and sour the tempers of men, are avoided; while the common good, the general object, is zealously pursued.

From this view of our system, its utility must be sufficiently obvious. The universal principles of the Art unite, in one indissoluble bond of affection, men of the most opposite tenets, of the most distant countries, and of the most contradictory opinions; so that in every nation a Mason may find a friend and in every climate a home.*

Such is the nature of our institution, that, in the lodge which is confined to no particular spot, union is cemented by sincere attachment, and pleasure reciprocally communicated in the cheerful observance of every obliging office. Virtue, the grand object in view, luminous as the meridian sun, shines refulgent on the mind, enlivens the heart, and heightens cool approbation into warm sympathy and cordial attention.

PRESTON.

* On this principle, unfortunate captives in war, and so journers, accidentally cast on a distant shore, are particular objects of attention, and seldom fail to experience indulgence from Masons; and it is very remarkable that there is not an instance on record of a breach of fidelity, or of ingratitude, where that indulgence has been liberally extended.

GOVERNMENT OF THE FRATERNITY.

THE mode of the government observed by the fraternity will give the best idea of the nature and design of the Masonic institution.

Three classes are established among Masons, under different appellations. The privileges of each class are distinct; and particular means are adopted to preserve these privileges to the just and meritorious. Honor and probity are recommendations to the first class, in which the practice of virtue is enforced, and the duties of morality are inculcated: while the mind is prepared for a regular progress in the principles of knowledge and philosophy. Diligence, assiduity, and application, are qualifications for the second class, in which is given an accurate elucidation of science, both in theory and practice. Here human reason is cultivated by a due exertion of the intellectual powers and faculties; nice and difficult theories are explained, new discoveries are produced and those already known beautifully embellished. The Third Class is restricted to a selected few, whom truth and fidelity have distinguished, whom years and experience have improved, and whom merit and abilities have entitled to preferment; with them the ancient landmark of the order are preserved, and from them we learn the necessary instructive lessons which dignify the art, and qualify the professor to illustrate its excellence and utility.

Such is the established plan of the Masonic System. By this judicious arrangement, true Friendship is cultivated among different ranks of men, Hospitality promoted, Industry rewarded, and Ingenuity encouraged.

MARTIN'S SHORT-HAND

—AND—

Type-Writing Institute,

618-620 Olive St., ST. LOUIS, MO.

ESTABLISHED, MARCH, 1876.

Instruction Personally or by Mail.

TRIAL WEEK FREE.

This is the oldest Shorthand and Type-Writing School in St. Louis. It is the largest, having an attendance equal to that of all the others combined. It is the only one making a specialty of shorthand instruction, all others being Commercial Colleges in which Shorthand is regarded and taught as a side issue. It has a full corps of competent teachers, each having his or her special department, and is not conducted on the "Cheap John" basis adopted by many similar schools. It is now, as for the past ten years, under the management of Prof. R. Martin, whose entire attention is devoted to maintaining, and, if possible, increasing its efficiency. Its graduates are noted for the rapidity and accuracy of their work, and for their success in obtaining and holding lucrative positions as Stenographers and Type-Writers. It is endorsed by the leading Stenographers and business men of this and other cities, who recommend it in preference to any other.

All instruction is given individually, not in class, so that the pupil is advanced as rapidly as he desires, and his capacity permits. Graduates are assisted to positions.

Descriptive circulars, containing information of value to all intending students, free on application to

THE ST. LOUIS GUIDE.

EDITED BY JOHN R. WILLIAMS.

HISTORY.

THE visitor to St. Louis sets foot in no city of recent establishment. The Great West may be new, but of the important cities of the country St. Louis is one of the oldest. Philadelphia was founded only eighty years before, and Baltimore only thirty, and at the time of the first settlement in St. Louis, the sites of the other representative cities of the west, Cincinnati, Louisville and Chicago, were still slumbering in unbroken forest.

The first white men who ever saw the spot on which the city now stands were a party of Frenchmen, headed by Marquette and Joliet, who in two canoes floated down the Mississippi river early in July, 1673. This was the first exploration of the great river, though the Spaniard, De Soto, marching overland through the wilderness from Florida, had discovered it in 1541. In a few years after Marquette's voyage down the Mississippi, the French made settlements at several points along its banks. Kaskaskia, the oldest and most important of these settlements, sixty miles below St. Louis, was founded about 1685, nearly at the same time with Philadelphia. Cahokia was settled a few years later. New Orleans began its growth in 1718. Thus while the English settlements in America were limited to small strips along the Atlantic coast, the French, coming first by way of Canada and afterward New Orleans, had established settlements in the heart of the continent and in the name of their king lay claim to the whole country west of the Alleghenies. Of all European nations the French seemed best to harmonize with the Indian race. They made the red men their companions and in the dusky maidens of the forest not infrequently found wives. While the children of the English settler east of the Alleghenies trembled at the name of the Pequod or Mohawk, the Frenchman a thousand miles farther in the wilderness slept at ease in same wigwam with the red warrior, or shared with him the same venison.

Pierre Laclede Liquest, commonly called Laclede, began the building of the first house in St. Louis, on the 15th of February, 1764. He had previously visited the place and selected it as the most advantageous point on the west bank of the river from which to carry on the fur trade. He brought with him a colony of thirty. The first building erected were on the block at Main and Walnut streets on which now stands Barnum's hotel. Several circumstances conspired to give the place a healthy and substantial growth from the first. Important among these was the fact that the territory east of the Mississippi had been ceded to Great Britain in 1763. The French were patriotic, and not liking the idea of becoming English subjects, moved to the west side of the river, thinking thus to continue their allegiance to the king of France.

ST. LOUIS GUIDE.

By a secret treaty made in 1762, the country west of the Mississippi had, however, been transferred to Spain. In a few months the new village numbered sixty inhabitants. The French settlers were left to their own government till 1770 when a representative of the Spanish government assumed authority. The records and documents prior to 1770 were in the French language; thereafter the Spanish was the official language till 1804, when the country west of the Mississippi, then, known as Louisiana, became part of the United States. In 1766 the number of inhabitants was probably not less than five hundred. Thereafter the population for several years increased slowly. Some of the wealthy inhabitants east of the river made the place their home after the passage of the ordinance of 1787 prohibiting slavery in Illinois. The Revolutionary war of the Atlantic Colonies caused not a ripple of disturbance in St. Louis. In 1780 there was an Indian attack in which a few citizens at work in the fields near the present Fair Grounds were killed, and that year was thereafter known as L'annee du coup (the year of the attack.) L'annee des grandes eaux (the year of the great flood) was 1785. 1787 was L'annee des dix bateaux (the year of the ten boats. These ten boats were armed and equipped at New Orleans, and ascended the Mississippi to clear the river of a large band of robbers and pirates who then had their headquarters at Grand Tower, and levied heavy tribute on passing commerce. The scarcity of bread stuffs in early times gave the place the name of Pain Court, while its neighbor, Carondelet, was not infrequently known under the title of Vide Poche, or empty pocket. The houses of the old French town were built on what are now known as Main and Second streets. The river front was then a lime stone bluff, ascended by only two roads, one at Market and the other at Morgan street. At Fourth and Walnut was a stone fort garrisoned by a company of soldiers, half French and half Spanish, and defended by eight or ten cannon, which the Spaniards took with them on their evacuation of the country after its cession to the United States.

In 1801 Louisiana was ceded by Spain back to France, though the latter country made no attempt to take actual possession. In 1803 Napoleon sold it to the United States, and March 10, 1804, the formal transfer at St. Louis was made. There was little demonstration or show of interest on the part of the inhabitants, though as the one ensign was lowered from the flag staff, and the stars and stripes mounted in its place, Charles Gratiot is said to have called for three cheers, while Delassus, the old Spanish commandant, wept. The population at that time was nearly one thousand, and almost altogether French and Spanish. In 1809 the number of the inhabitants was about twelve hundred, among whom were few Americans, and these mostly attached to the government service. Two years later the population had increased two hundred. A traveler of that period writes, "It bids fair to become second to New Orleans in importance on this river," though at the same time it was observed that New Madrid was a more attractive spot to the emigration which had begun to flow in from the eastward. Washington Irving who visited the place in 1810 says the population "was more motley than at Mackinaw. Here was to be seen about the river banks, the hectoring, extravagant boatmen of the Mississippi with the gay, grimacing, singing, good humored Canadian voyageurs. Vagrant Indians of various tribes loitered about the streets. Now and then a stark Kentucky hunter in leathern hunting dress, with rifle on shoulder and knife in belt, strode along. Here and there were new brick houses and shops, just set up by bustling, driving and eager men of traffic from the Atlantic states, while on the other hand the old French mansions with open casements still retained the easy indolent air of the original colonists; and now and then the scraping of a fiddle, a strain of ancient French song, or the sound of billiard balls showed that the happy Gallic turns for gayety and amusement still lingered about the place."

A post office was established in 1804. The first newspaper was printed in 1808, and in 1816 the first bank incorporated. St. Louis was incorporated as a town in 1809, and in 1822 received its first city charter. In 1826 the present names were given to the streets. General Lafayette visited the city in 1825, and a splendid ball was given in his honor at the Mansion House on the northeast corner of Third and Market streets. In the summer of 1836, Daniel Webster was the city's guest, and was feasted at a great barbecue in Lucas grove near the present Twelfth and Olive streets. The cholera beginning in 1848, swept away one-sixth of the native population. The great fire of 1849 destroyed one-third of the city and nearly the whole of its steam boat interests. The building of the Pacific railway, the first railroad west of the river, was commenced in 1851, and of the Ohio & Mississippi, the first railroad constructed on the east side, in 1852.

The city began to grow steadily with the advent of steamboat transportation. The navigation of the river, especially up stream, had previously been dangerous and difficult. The voyage by flat and keel boat from Pittsburgh to St. Louis was a matter of three month's time, and from New Orleans much longer. The keel boat passenger fare from New Orleans to St. Louis was about one hundred and twenty-five dollars, and freight was paid for at the rate of three dollars and a half per hundred pounds. When steamboats began running these charges were reduced to one-fifth. The first steamboat to reach St. Louis was the Zebulon M. Pike. The date was August 2, 1817.

The following figures show the population of the city at different periods:

LOCAL NAMES.

Cote Brilliante is the name of a district four miles northwest of the Court House through which Easton Avenue (or St. Charles Rock Road) runs as the principal thoroughfare. Carondelet is the southern part of the city, six miles below the Court House. It had formerly an independent city government and was consolidated with St. Louis in 1870. It is the seat of large iron manufacturing interests. Baden is six miles north of the city on the Bellefontaine Road. Lowel is near the Water Tower. Compton Hill is the elevated portion of the city west of Lafayette Park, and two miles and a half southwest of the Court House, and is a choice residence section. Frenchtown adjoins the French market less than a mile south of the Court House. Butchertown is north of Easton Avenue a few blocks west of Grand Avenue and abounds in slaughter houses.

Kerry Patch was the name given a district between Seventeenth and Twentieth streets and Mullanphy and Biddle, settled about 1842 by Irish emigrants. This part of the city was then commons without street lines and the shanties were sprinkled about the patch promiscuously, all the occupants being squatters. The name still hangs to that section of the city. "Clabber Alley" runs north and south from Franklin avenue to Biddle street between Sixth and Seventh. It has many tenement houses and a dense population of various colors and nationalities, and with "Wild Cat Chute" is one of the poorest quarters of the city. The latter place is an alley running north and south between Seventh and Eighth streets, and from Carr to Biddle, filled with tenements and peopled by a low class of negroes.

THE CITY'S AREA.

More than sixty-two square miles are embraced within the city limits of St. Louis, or nearly forty thousand acres. The length from north to south is seventeen miles, and six and five-eighths miles from east to west. It has a river front of eighteen and one-half miles. The wharf or levee is paved for three and one-half miles.

THE BRIDGE.

The great steel bridge which spans the Mississippi from Third street and Washington avenue is one of the chief features of interest about the city, and should be observed carefully as an object that has excited curiosity among scientific people both in this country and in Europe. To the traveler from the east a ride across it is his first item of acquaintance with the city. It is not, however, from the railway car that it should be seen and studied. From the Levee at about the foot of Olive street the structure best presents itself to the eye. Here it can be seen as a whole, and from this point its beauty, strength and vastness are better comprehended. The roadway at the top should also be visited. On a pleasant day, and particularly on a summer evening after sunset, the promenade is a delightful one, and there is no better place from which the city itself can be studied.

It was proposed to bridge the Mississippi at St. Louis as early as 1839, and the project was revived in 1848, 1853 and 1855. The company which built the bridge was organized in 1867, and from that time the work was pushed till its completion. The construction of the piers was commenced in 1868 and finished in 1872. The piers rest on the bed-rock of the river. The west abutment is 112 feet high from its base, the west pier 172 feet, the east pier 197 feet and the east abutment 192 feet. At ordinary stage of the river one hundred feet in height of the east pier is below the surface of the water. The piers were built in caissons and sunk through the sand to the rock at the bottom of the river. Beneath were chambers of compressed air in which a large number of workmen were employed. The pressure of the air in the air-chamber of the east pier reached sixty-five pounds to the square inch, or four and one-third times the normal pressure. The effect upon the workmen was very severe. Over one hundred men were violently attacked by cramps and chills, and thirteen died from this cause. The arches are made of steel tubes. The spans of the side arches are 502 feet in length, and the central span 520 feet.

There are 2,393 tons of steel in the structure, and 3,156 tons of wrought iron. It is estimated that if the roadway above should be packed with people, and the railway tracks below covered from end to

The length of the bridge proper is 2,046 feet, and including the approaches, 6,220 feet, or nearly one and one-fifth miles. The total cost was about ten millions of dollars. Altogether there are eighteen parks and squares belonging to the city and dedicated to the public use.

FOREST PARK.

This is the largest of the city parks, and contains 1,372 acres. It lies directly west of the centre of the city, four miles from the Court House, fronting one mile on King's Highway. The act authorizing its establishment was passed by the legislature in 1874. The land comprising it was condemned and purchased at a cost of $799,965. Eleven hundred acres were natural forest. The formal opening occurred June 25, 1876, on which occasion the bronze statue of Edward Bates was unveiled. The river Des Peres, a small stream, runs through the eastern part. It is a favorite resort for drives and picnic parties. A statue of Frank P. Blair was added to its attractions in 1885. The Laclède avenue street railway from Fourth and Market streets runs directly to the park, and it is also accessible by Wabash trains from the Union depot.

LAFAYETTE PARK.

Lafayette park is one of the oldest parks in the city, and nature and art have combined to make it one of the handsomest in the country. It is thirty acres in extent, and is one and a half miles southwest of the Court House between Mississippi and Missouri and Park and Lafayette avenues. It is in an elevated portion of the city, the height of the mound in the park above the city directrix at the river being 138 feet. The ground comprising the park was formerly part of the old St. Louis commons, and was reserved for park purposes in the bill authorizing the sale of the commons in 1835. The park was dedicated and established in 1851, but little was done toward the adornment of the grounds till 1863. Since that time the improvement has been rapid. Handsome walks, trees, grottoes, rustic bridges, fountains and flowers now make the place attractive. Here is a lake with boats and water fowl. From a handsome music stand concerts are regularly given in the summer. The bronze statue of Thomas H. Benton was cast at Munich from a design by Harriet Hosmer, and was unveiled by Jessie Benton Fremont, Benton's daughter, amid imposing ceremonies May 27, 1868. Its cost was thirty-six thousand dollars. The inscription "There is the East; there is India," is taken from a speech made at St. Louis in 1849 in favor of a railway to the Pacific. There is also in the park a copy of Houdon's statue of Washington. By reason of its easy access, its location in a built up portion of the city, and its attractions, this park is probably a place of more frequent resort than any other of the public pleasure grounds of the city. The blue cars of the Union Depot line from Fourth and Pine streets and the Lafayette avenue cars running south on Fourth street, are the best means of access.

SCHNAIDER'S GARDEN.

Schnaider's Garden is situated on Chouteau Ave. corner of Mississippi Ave., within two blocks of Lafayette Park. This is one of the oldest parks in the city, having been established by Mr. Joseph Schnaider as early as 1869, and is now the favorite resort for the gay and fashionable people of the city, and a delight and wonder to visitors. Over one thousand gas jets of variegated colors and arranged in beautiful shapes and fantastic designs, illuminate the grounds. Good music is always in attendance afternoons and evenings, and refreshments are served.

TOWER GROVE PARK.

Tower Grove Park is on Grand Avenue, extending west to King's Highway, and between Magnolia Avenue and Arsenal street, three miles southwest of the Court House, and is one of the chief attractions to the city. It contains 277 acres. Its establishment is due to the munificence of Henry Shaw, owner of Shaw's Garden, who in 1868 presented, under certain conditions the land embraced in the park, to the city. One of these conditions was that three hundred and sixty thousand dollars should be devoted by the city to the improvement of the ground as a public park. In 1870 the park was opened. Up to 1875 nearly half a million of dollars had been expended. The result is one of the most beautiful and attractive places of resort to be found in the country. The grounds have been arranged with much taste, and abound in indigenous and foreign shade trees, shrubs and flowers. Two chief features of interest are bronze statues of Shakespeare and Humboldt, both cast in Germany and costing together nearly one hundred thousand dollars. These were both gifts of Henry Shaw to the city. On the pedestal on which stands the Shakespeare statue are finely executed bas reliefs of Shakespearian characters. The Humboldt statue represents the great naturalist at the age of thirty. On the sides of the granite pedestal are medallion views of Mount Chimborazo, which Humboldt was the first to ascend, and of the valley of the Amazon, and a portrait of Mr. Shaw. These statues were placed in the park in 1878. Shaw's Garden adjoins the western part of the park. There is music every Sunday afternoon during the summer. The Union Depot Line of cars from Fourth and Pine streets run to the park, and it can also be reached by the People's Railway running south on Fourth street,

SHAW'S GARDEN.

Though private property, Shaw's Garden (or the Missouri Botanical Garden) is one of the best known and most frequented points of interest about St. Louis. It is on Tower Grove avenue between Shaw and Magnolia avenues, three and three-quarters miles southwest of the Court House, and lies next to the western part of Tower Grove Park. The grounds are fifty acres in extent and form one of the finest places of the kind in the country. Every known variety of tree, plant and flower are here found. The residence of the owner, Henry Shaw, adjoins the Garden. He is an Englishman by birth, has resided in St. Louis since 1819, and as a citizen of St. Louis has been most open-handed and liberal in his benefactions. The grounds are open to the public without charge on week days. Take Union Depot Line of cars from Fourth and Pine streets, fare five cents. By this route a walk across Tower Grove Park is necessary before reaching the grounds. From terminus of People's Railway line of cars running south on Fourth street, a hack line, fare twenty-five cents, runs to the Garden.

BENTON PARK.

Is three miles from the Court House in the southern part of the city. It contains fourteen acres. The site is well adapted by nature for park purposes. Its attractive walks and shades make it a place of pleasant resort for the residents of the vicinity, by

CARONDELET PARK.

Carondelet park is in Carondelet on Ninth street between Kansas and Loughborough avenues. It was established by Act of the State Legislature in 1874, by which two hundred thousand dollars was appropriated for its purchase and improvement. South St. Louis cars from Sixth and Market streets, or the Iron Mountain railway trains from Fourth and Chouteau avenue.

CARR SQUARE,

Between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets and Wash and Carr, embraces more than two acres. The site was presented to the city by Judge William C. Carr in 1842 on condition that it should always be used as a public square. It covers a piece of depressed ground which was for many years used as a receptacle for refuse, but which was afterward filled in and improved. Cable cars from Sixth and Locust streets.

EXCHANGE SQUARE,

On the river at Front and Warren Streets was presented to the city in 1816 to be used as a commons forever. Its location and surroundings have made it of little value for park purposes, and it lies unimproved and unattractive.

GAMBLE PLACE.

Is the smallest piece of ground used for public park purposes in the city. It is little more than an acre in extent, and was opened as a park in 1875 at the expense of adjacent property owners, though it is now maintained by the city. It is between Gamble and Dickson streets, and Garrison and Glasgow avenues. This was formerly the site of a reservoir built in 1867 to temporarily supply the city with water, while the old Benton street reservoir was being cleaned. Franklin avenue cars.

GRAVOIS PARK.

In the southwest part of the city between Pontiac street and Kansas avenue, and Miami street and Louisiana avenue. It comprises eight and one-quarter acres. It has the advantage of large shade trees. The Union Depot line of cars from Fourth and Pine streets.

HYDE PARK.

This is an attractive pleasure ground with flowers, fountains and trees, much frequented by residents of the northern part of the city, and situated between Salisbury street and Bremen avenue, and Twelfth and Fourteenth streets, two miles and one-half northwest of the Court House. The ground included in it, twelve acres, was purchased by the city in 1854. Take Union Depot line of cars from Fourth and Locust streets.

Court House, and reached by the Benton-Bellefontaine street cars from Fourth street and Washington Avenue. Clinton Place is one block south and Marion Place one block north. These plats of ground were presented to the city in 1816. Jackson Place was reserved for a public square, and the other two tracts devoted to school and church buildings.

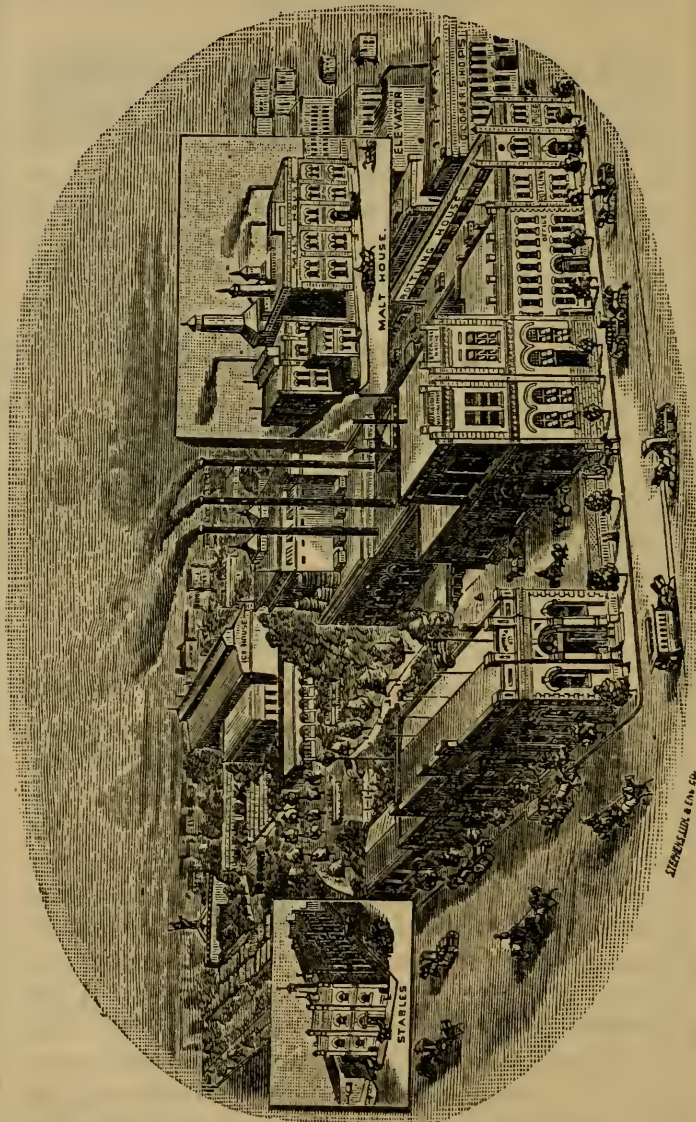

LACLEDE PARK.

A small reservation of about three acres, four and one-quarter miles south of the Court House, at Iowa avenue and Osage street, was reserved for park purposes in 1854. Little attention has been given to its improvement. South St. Louis cars from Sixth and Market streets.

LYON PARK.

The ten acres included in this park formerly belonged to the United States Arsenal grounds, and were granted to the city by Act of Congress in 1869 on condition that a monument be erected to Gen. Nathaniel Lyon who was in command of the Arsenal at the time of the commencement of the War of the Rebellion. This monument was dedicated in 1874. On this spot Gen. Lyon made the first military preparations for the war that was made on the Union side in Missouri, and here organized his division for the Western Missouri campaign. The park is near the river on Broadway between Arsenal and Utah streets and is reached by Broadway line of cars going south. It is two and one-half miles south of the Court House.

O'FALLON PARK.

This park commemorates the name of Col. John O'Fallon, a public spirited and much respected citizen who died in 1865. It has a commanding position covering the slope of the bluff overlooking the river, the natural situation being, perhaps the finest of any of the city parks. Here was the O'Fallon residence. There is an original growth of forest trees which had been carefully preserved by the former owner. The park became the property of the city in 1875. It contains 159 acres. It is three and three-fourths miles north of the Court House, a short distance south of Bellefontaine Cemetery, and is reached by the Broadway cars going north, and the Baden extension from their terminus.

ST. LOUIS PLACE.

This is a long narrow strip of ground, fifteen acres in extent, Eighteenth street between Benton and Hebert. Much of the park is in a hollow, but it is well improved with walks, trees and flowers. The site was given to the city for a pleasure ground in 1848. Immediately south of the park was the location of the old reservoir used previous to the construction of the present water works system. Two miles northwest of the Court House. Mound City line of cars from Fourth and Pine streets.

WASHINGTON SQUARE

originally a part of the old Chouteau mill tract, and was purchased by the city in 1840, at a cost of twenty-five thousand dollars, "to be used as a public square forever." PLAN OF THE CITY.

The city is laid off on a simple and regular plan. The east and west streets in the old central part were given the names of trees, as for instance, Chestnut, Walnut, Olive, Locust, Elm and Myrtle. Afterward as new streets were opened, some of the early French pioneers were commemorated in the appellations of some of the thorough-fares as Chouteau avenue, Gratiot street and Cerre street. The north and south streets parallel with the river, except in the western part of the city, are designated by numbers instead of names, as Second street, Third street and Fourth streets. The city blocks are not uniform in size, but on an average sixteen blocks make a mile. One hundred house numbers are reckoned to the block, though there are few blocks in which they approach that figure; the most do not exceed forty. In the east and west streets the numbers begin at the river. Second Street is 200, Third street is 300 and so on. In the north and south streets the numbers run from Market street. Walnut street, one block south of Market, is 100 south, and Chestnut Street one block north is 100 north. By keeping these facts in mind any locality in the city can easily be found by a stranger. Thus, 1,500 North Fifteenth Street would be fifteen blocks north of Market Street, and remembering the number of blocks to the mile, it would at once be seen that the location is about one mile north of Market Street and west of the river.

PRINCIPAL STREETS.

Main and Second streets are mostly devoted to the wholesale trade. Fourth street and Broadway (formerly Fifth street) are the most fashionable and popular of the north and south thoroughfares, and many of the large retail establishments here have their quarters. The Court House and Southern Hotel are between these two streets, fronting on both. On Fourth street are the Casino, the Planters House, Globe-Democrat office, Hurst's Hotel and Everitt House. On Broadway are the Olympic Theatre, St. James Hotel, new Hurst's Hotel, Mercantile Library and Union Market. Broadway is one of the longest streets, and extends from Carondelet to the extreme northern part of the city.

Market street divides the city in the system of numbering. North Fourth street is north of Market Street, and South Fourth street is south of it. On this street are the Court House, Grand Opera House, Post Dispatch building, Masonic Hall and City Hall.

Olive street is the third street north of Market, and is a leading retail street and a much traveled thoroughfare. On this street are the old Post Office building, the new Post Office and Custom House, Pope's theatre and the Exposition building.

Washington avenue is 600 north, the sixth street north from Market. It has a more generous width than most of its neighbors. Some of the largest wholesale houses are here. The bridge across the Mississippi begins at Third street and Washington avenue. On this street are the Lindell Hotel, the Hotel Barnum, St. Louis University, Washington University, the Smith Academy, St. Luke's Hospital, Pickwick theatre and Uhrig's Cave.

Franklin avenue is 900 north. Though not so fashionable a shopping street as Fourth, Fifth and Olive, it is lined for two miles with retail stores and business places. At Leffingwell avenue (2,800 Easton avenue branches off to the northwest, and on this street the business houses are continued.

Jefferson avenue is one of the leading north and south streets. It is 2,600 west, about a mile and a half west of the Court House, and crosses the railroad tracks in Mill Creek valley over a bridge of handsome construction. On this street are the League base ball park, Uhrig's Cave and the Children's Hospital.

GRAND AVENUE

A fine bridge across the Mill Creek valley is now in course of construction, and when completed the northern and southern portions will be joined in one great highway. In the northern and northwest part of the city the Water Works, the Water Tower, Fair Grounds and Sportsman's Park are on this street, and in the southwest Tower Grove Park.

VANDEVENTER PLACE,

On the west side of Grand avenue above Franklin avenue, and extending three blocks to Vandeventer avenue deserves to be visited by those desirous of seeing a choice residence part of the city. It is not a public thoroughfare, and has rather the characteristics of a private park.

DRIVES.

The best drives are out Pine or Locust streets, which have smooth asphalt pavements, to Grand avenue. From north Grand avenue the Fair Grounds can be reached, and by way of Florissant avenue, O'Fallon Park and Bellefontaine and Calvary cemeteries. Page avenue is a favorite drive west from Grand avenue to King's Highway, four miles west of the Court House, and thence through Forest Park. Tower Grove Park should be taken in in the southwest part of the city. There is no drive in the city more pleasant and attractive than through this park. Return from Tower Grove Park by

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

This building in which the Merchant's Exchange transacts business is on Third street between Pine and Chestnut, occupying the greater part of the block. Its construction was begun in July, 1873, and it was completed in December, 1875. It is built of Warrensburg sandstone in the renaissance order of architecture, and its total cost, including the site, was one million, eight hundred thousand dollars. It has a frontage of two hundred and thirty-five feet by a depth of two hundred and eighty-seven. The grand staircase leading from the basement to the hall cost twenty-five thousand dollars. The Exchange Hall is one of the most spacious and splendid rooms in the country. It is two hundred and thirty-five feet in length, by ninety-eight in breadth, with a height of sixty-nine feet. The decoration of the ceiling is in the Venetian school of the sixteenth century, and deserves to be carefully studied. In this hall met the Democratic National Convention of 1876, which nominated Samuel J. Tilden for the presidency, and on that occasion the floor was occupied by five thousand two hundred chairs, and contained at one time over ten thousand people. The Merchant's Exchange is an organization of St. Louis merchants and business men in every branch of trade and comprises between three and four thousand members.

COTTON EXCHANGE.

The Cotton Exchange building is a large iron and brick structure on the southwest corner of Main and Walnut streets, completed in 1882, and is used by members of the Cotton Exchange. St. Louis is one of the leading cotton markets of the United States.

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE.

The Real Estate Exchange has a building on Seventh street between Market and Chestnut. The real estate agents of the city here display lists of property for sale or rent, and auction sales of real estate are here often made.

MECHANICS EXCHANGE.

The mechanics of St. Louis have a large and strong organization, and their Exchange is on the west side of Seventh street between Market and Chestnut.

THE COURT HOUSE.

The Court House occupies the block bounded by Broadway and Fourth, Market and Chestnut streets. This square of ground was selected in 1823, and was then described as situated "on the hill." From a much earlier period the ground had been the site of the whipping-post where the sheriff laid the "lashes on well, without fear or favor," according to his sworn duty till that means of punishment was abolished. The construction of the building began in 1852, and it was not completed till 1862, ten years afterward. It is of the Grecian-Doric order of architecture, and is built in the form of a Greek cross. The dome is especially symmetrical and beautiful. Its summit is one hundred and ninety-eight feet above the street. There is a tradition that from the dome a person with a strong glass can survey an area of more than three hundred square miles, extending beyond Kirkwood on the west, Carondelet on the south, up to Alton on the north, and to the east far out on the Illinois prairies, but the usual observer will find his vision limited to a much smaller range by the cloud of smoke which generally hangs over the east part of the city. The four paintings on the interior panels of the dome are by Wiemar, an artist of merit, and represent the discovery of the Mississippi by De Soto, the Landing of Laclede at the foot of Market Street in 1764, the Indian attack of 1780, and a western landscape and buffalo chase.

Only the civil courts here hold their sessions. Besides the five divisions of the Circuit Court, there are the St. Louis Court of Appeals and Probate Court. The Law Library is also here, and the offices of the Circuit Clerk, Assessor, Collector, Recorder and Sheriff. The central office of the fire alarm department is also in this building. Admission may be had to the dome.

THE FOUR COURTS.

In this building, on Clark avenue between Eleventh and Twelfth streets, the business of the Criminal courts is conducted. MISSOURI SCHOOL OF MIDWIFERY, 2020 N. NINTH STREET,

Is now justly regarded as one of the most beneficent institutions of the city, and has well earned its position in the first rank of the Medical Colleges of Missouri, having graduated the great majority of those now practicing midwifery in this city and state, and many who have taken up the practice in other states. The importance of such an institution and of such an instruction as is there received, practically as well as theoretically, can be best appreciated by those who have witnessed the suffering, long ill health and sometimes even death, resulting from lack of skill and knowledge on the part of those professing this difficult and delicate branch of medical science. In connection with the college is a lying-in-hospital so that students have the opportunity of obtaining practical as well as theoretical instruction at the bedside. This is the most important point to be considered as every one knows that a person may have a thorough theoretical knowledge of anything, and at the same time be practically ignorant of the whole business. It must not be inferred from this however that the utmost privacy cannot be secured when desired. On the contrary ladies expecting to be confined can here secure the most comfortable quarters, the best medical treatment and care, with all the privacy their own homes would afford. The spring course begins the first Monday of March and the fall term begins the first Monday of September each year, and intending students should at once communicate with Mrs. Dr. S. S. Correction, and the First District Police Court. The name of 'Four Courts' is said to have been given by a judge of Irish birth, from its resemblance to the Four Courts of Dublin. It is also the headquarters of the Police Department.

THE CITY HALL.

The city government is centered in the City Hall on Eleventh street between Market and Chestnut. Here the Mayor, Comptroller, Treasurer, Auditor, Register, Recorder of Votes, Counsellor, Health Commissioner, Assessor and Collector of Water Rates, Inspector of Weights and Measures, Commissioner of Buildings and Supplies, Park Commissioner, Wharf Commissioner, Sewer Commissioner, Street Commissioner, and other public officials have their offices. The city legislative departments also meet here. It is a large, plain brick structure, completed in 1873, and when constructed was only intended to be used for its present purpose for a few years till a more elegant and substantial structure could be erected.

The Jail is in the rear of the Four Courts on Clark avenue between Eleventh and Twelfth streets. It is arranged in the form of an amphitheatre, and has one hundred and seventy-seven cells constructed of wrought iron, each large enough to contain three prisoners.

The City Dispensary is in the City Hall building at Eleventh and Market streets. About five thousand patients are here prescribed for yearly, more than six thousand sent to the City Hospital, two thousand to the Female Hospital, and six thousand ambulance calls answered.

CITY HOSPITAL.

The City Hospital is a large brick building at the corner of Linn street and Lafayette avenue, a mile and a half southwest of the Court House. The present building was constructed in 1857, the one which previously occupied the spot (built in 1846) having been destroyed by fire in 1856. The site was originally occupied by the St. Louis cemetery. Upwards of six thousand patients are treated here yearly. The Lafayette avenue wing was built in 1874. ST. LOUIS INSANE ASYLUM.

On the Arsenal Street road five miles southwest of the Court House, and half a mile east of the Female Hospital. The construction of this building was begun in 1864 and completed in 1869. It is the most conspicuous structure in the suburbs of St. Louis. While the site is only fifteen feet lower than the highest ground in the city the building itself is at its loftiest point one hundred and ninety-four feet in height and can be seen from a distance of ten miles, and from two-thirds of the city. It is three hundred and fourteen feet in length, has four hundred and thirty-seven windows, and cost seven hundred thousand dollars. HOUSE OF REFUGE.

This is a reformatory school for juvenile offenders. It is in the southern part of the city four miles from the Court House on Louisiana avenue, between Gasconade and Osage streets. The institution has upwards of two hundred inmates of whom about one-fourth are girls. The usual time of detention is about twenty months. The greater part are returned to parents and friends; some are indentured to good homes, and others are released on good behavior.

THE WORK HOUSE.

This institution is between Broadway and the river at Meramec street. To this place are sent persons convicted of minor crimes, vagrancy and various offences, and an opportunity is given the prisoners to serve the city during their period of confinement. No partiality is shown to sex or color, but all are usefully employed. The common occupation of the men is breaking rock at the quarry on the work-house grounds, and while bending over their unhappy fate at the rock pile, sentries armed with rifles and shot guns, pace to and fro to check any sudden aspirations the prisoners might

THE WATER WORKS.

The construction of the present system of water works was commenced in 1867. The pumping station is at Bissell's Point on the river three miles and a half north of the Court House. The storage reservoir is on Compton Hill at Grand and Lafayette avenues, nearly three miles southwest of the Court House, on one of the highest points in the city, the reservoir having an elevation of one hundred and seventy-six feet above the city directrix. At Bissell's Point there are four settling reservoirs, each six hundred feet long, two hundred and seventy feet wide, and fourteen deep, into which the water is pumped from the river, by three engines, two of which have a capacity of eighteen million gallons each per day, and the other twenty-four million gallons. Each of the four reservoirs holds about eighteen million gallons. While one is being filled, in another the water is settling, from a third one it is being drawn off, while the fourth is being cleaned and made ready to be filled in its turn. The water settles in twenty-four hours. After the water is settled another set of engines forces it through the mains to the storage reservoirs on Compton Hill whence it is distributed over the city. The Compton Hill reservoir is eight hundred feet long, two hundred and fifty feet wide, and twenty-four feet deep, and holds sixty million gallons. The supply main between the pumping station and the Compton Hill reservoir is laid along Grand avenue and consists of eighteen thousand feet of thirty-six inch pipe, and seven thousand feet of thirty inch pipe, in all, nearly five miles. At various points lines of twenty inch pipe connect the Grand avenue main with the distributing system.

THE WATER TOWER.

To relieve the strain on the engines at the pumping station of the Water Works, is a stand pipe at

ST. LOUIS GUIDE.

Fourteenth street and Grand avenue. This stand pipe is five feet in diameter, and one hundred and sixty feet in height. It is enclosed in a brick shaft in the interior of which is a spiral stair case leading to an observatory at the top, from which a magnificent view of the city and adjoining country can be had. A new stand pipe nearer the river was also erected in 1885. The Benton-Bellefontaine street car line runs to the Water Tower.

MERCANTILE LIBRARY.

The Mercantile Library is at the corner of Broadway and Locust streets. It was founded in 1846. The present building was completed and occupied in 1864, and at the time of building was regarded as one of the handsomest edifices in the city. A new building on the present site is now in contemplation. The library contains upwards of sixty-five thousand volumes. A large reading room is well supplied with the periodical literature of the day. There are also in the rooms a number of paintings, curiosities and works of art. There are two statues in marble, Enone and Beatrice Cenci, by Harriet Hosmer, and marble busts of Burns and Scott. The library is open to visitors, and strangers in the city, on introduction of members, receive a card entitling them to the privileges of the library and reading room one month.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The Public Library, formerly Public School Library, is in the O'Fallon Polytechnic building on the southwest corner of Seventh and Chestnut streets. The society was incorporated in 1865. In

ST. LOUIS GUIDE.

1869 the library came under the entire control of the Board of Public Schools. Rapid progress has been made in the accumulation of books, and the library now is very full and complete, numbering about sixty thousand volumes. The charges for membership are very low, and the reading room is free to all persons. Those not members are also allowed to take books for reading in the rooms without charge. The library is open on Sunday.

THE MISSOURI HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

Has a library of about five thousand volumes, a large number of archæological specimens, and many historical relics and curiosities. Meets in Court House.

LAW LIBRARY.

The Law Library is in the south wing of the Court House. It is an extensive collection of works of legal learning numbering over ten thousand volumes, and is much patronized by the lawyers of the city to whom its membership is exclusively confined. Any member of the legal profession outside of St. Louis city and county has the privilege of using the books.

YOUNG MEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

The building of this organization is at Twenty-ninth and Pine streets. A reading room, library, gymnasium and other features make it an attractive place to visitors, and young men, strangers in the city, are warmly welcomed.

MUSEUM OF FINE ARTS.

Occupies a fine structure on Lucas place and Nineteenth street, built by Wayman Crow in commemoration of his son who died in England in 1878, and conveyed by deed to Washington University. The building was dedicated in 1881. There is a fine collection of paintings and other works of art. A large and handsome lecture room is known as Memorial Hall. Admission twenty-five cents.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The Fire Department headquarters are at No. 6 Engine House on Seventh street between Pine and Olive. It requires twenty-five steam engines, six hook and ladder apparatus, about one hundred and seventy horses, and more than two hundred and fifty men to fight the fires that are continually breaking out. These appliances are stationed at different localities, so as to afford the best protection to property. The number of fire alarms each year is nearly six hundred. The department has reached a high degree of efficiency. Great promptness is shown in answering an alarm, and the horses rushing at full gallop along the street drawing after them the ponderous engines from which fly the smoke and sparks, is a sight at which the "oldest citizen" shows an interest.

JEFFERSON BARRACKS.

This is a United States military post, occupied by a detachment of the regular army, and situated on the river nine miles below the city. It is accessible by the Iron Mountain Railroad trains, and is a pleasant place to visit in summer. The site rises gradually from the river, and commands a fine view of the Mississippi. The construction of the buildings began in 1826. Before the Mexican war this place was the great rendezvous for the troops in the West, and from this point distributions of men and munitions of war were made to frontier garrisons. Many important military and exploring expeditions were here fitted out, and many officers who afterward became distinguished commanders in both the Union and Confederate armies, were at times stationed here. The grounds contain seventeen hundred and two acres. On one portion is a national cemetery, kept with great care, and a beautiful resting place for the dead. The remains of over ten thousand soldiers lie here, chiefly those who died during the War of the Rebellion. The parade ground is adorned with trees and flowers. The stone houses, built more than half a century ago, are in an excellent state of preservation.

GYMNASIUM.

On St. Charles street between Eighth and Ninth streets. The institution has many members and is well supplied with all the appliances for physical development.

THE ARMORY.

Is a large brick building, at Seventeenth and Pine streets, two hundred feet front by one hundred and nine feet in depth, built in 1882, and occupied by the militia organizations of the city. A large arena, seventy-four by one hundred and thirty-five feet, is used for calvary and artillery drill.

NATATORIUM.

At the corner of Nineteenth and Fine streets is the Natatorium or Swimming school, much patronized during the hot summer months, by those whose business engagements or pecuniary resources do not allow a trip to seaside resorts.

MARKETS.

The leading market is Union Market, between Broadway, Sixth street, Lucas avenue and Morgan street. On Saturdays especially it is a busy place, and thousands here obtain their supplies for the Sunday dinner. It occupies the whole block.

Biddle Market is on Thirteenth street between Biddle and O'Fallon. Sturgeon Market is at Broadway and North Market streets.

City Market, or as it is better known, the Round Top Market, is at Broadway and Biddle streets. It is called the "Round Top" Market from the style of the architecture of the roof.

The French Market is on Convent street at the junction of Broadway and Fourth street. This part of the city has retained, perhaps, the marks and characteristics of the early French population, more closely than any other, and hence the name.

CEMETERIES.

Bellefontaine Cemetery, on North Broadway, four miles and a-half from the Court House, is well worth a visit. It occupies the slope and summit of the river bluff (here a gentle rise of ground), is more thickly wooded than is usual with cemeteries, and a more beautiful resting place for the dead could not well be selected. It was opened in 1850; but many bodies were reinterred here from the older graveyards. There are many splendid monuments. On the stones may be read the names of the men, merchants, lawyers, physicians and business men, who, added to the City's growth and greatness. "After life's fitful fever they sleep well." The grounds comprise about four hundred acres. Take Broadway cars going north, and the extension cars (fare 10 cents) from the terminus of Broadway line.

Calvary Cemetery is the Catholic burying ground. It adjoins Bellefontaine Cemetery on the north, and is reached by same lines of cars. Interments in this cemetery began in 1854. The grounds are attractive, and like Bellefontaine, it is the resting place of many distinguished dead. There are a number of smaller cemeteries in the vicinity of the city.

THEATRES.

The Grand Opera House is on Market street, between Broadway and Sixth street. On its site was the old Varieties Theatre, built in 1851. In 1873 it became known as De Bar's Opera House, and afterward by its present name. The old structure was torn away and a new building erected in 1881. This was destroyed by fire in December, 1884, and the present structure erected in 1885.

The Olympic Theatre is on Broadway, between Walnut and Elm street, opposite the Southern Hotel. The old theatre building, on this site, was erected in 1866, and first used for variety performances. It was opened for the legitimate drama in 1869. In 1882 it was demolished, and the present edifice took its place.

Pope's Theatre is at Ninth and Olive streets. Here formerly stood the old Unitarian church which was purchased and transformed into a theatre in 1879.

The People's Theatre is on the south-west corner of Walnut and Sixth streets, and was built in 1881.

The Standard Theatre is at Seventh and Walnut streets, and was opened in 1883.

The Pickwick is a Theatre on Washington avenue, west of Jefferson avenue, in which occasional performances are held. It is the head-quarters for society amateur theatrical entertainments.

Uhrig's Cave, on the south-west corner of Jefferson and Washington avenues, is a summer garden theatre. The performances are usually the best of comic opera, and the attendance is from the best classes.

RAIL ROAD DEPOTS.

Union Depot, where nearly all passenger trains arrive and depart, is at Eleventh and Poplar streets, nearly three-quarters of a mile from the Court House, and is reached by the Union Depot line of cars from Fourth and Pine streets.

The Main Street Depot is on Main street, north of Washington avenue, at west end of the bridge. All passenger trains going to or coming from the Union Depot, stop here. It is often a convenient place to stop for persons without baggage who have business in this part of the city; but passengers should generally go to the Union Depot, where all baggage is delivered and where better means of communication with different parts of the city can be found. On taking the train at Main street five minutes can be allowed from the starting time at Union Depot, but no ticket can be purchased here or baggage checked.

Fourth and Chouteau avenue is the starting place for local accommodation trains on the Iron Mountain road for Carondelet and Jefferson Barracks. Take cars running south on Fourth street.

A few local accommodation trains on the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific railway leave from Vine street and the Levee.

The St. Louis, Cable & Western Depot is on Grand Avenue west of Olive Street. This is a narrow gauge railroad extending to Florissant in St. Louis county.

FERRIES.

There are several ferry companies running boats from the city to the east side of the river. The passenger fare is five cents. The ferry landings are at the foot of North Market street, Carr street Poplar street, Chouteau avenue, Anna street and Davis street.

STEAMBOATS.

There are four lines of boats running up the river, three running on the lower Mississippi, besides boats in the Illinois river and Missouri river trade. Information may be had at the wharf boats.

SUGAR REFINERY.

The highest, and along the river front, most conspicuous building in the city, is the Belcher Sugar Refinery at Main and Ashley streets, one mile north of the Court House. It has thirteen floors, and is one hundred and thirty-two feet in height. Near this building is an artesian well, twelve hundred feet deep, from which is obtained the "Belcher water," an ill-smelling liquid, but cold, sparkling, and supposed to be possessed of health-giving properties.

PARADE OF THE FLAMBEAU BATTALION.

Full Description and Programme of the PARADE OF THE GREAT FLAMBEAU BATTALION, which takes place during the Knights Templar Triennial Conclave at St. Louis. Two Hundred and Fifty Torch-Bearers in Line—Grand Display of Fire-Works on the Streets.

The organization of a Flambeau Battalion in St. Louis was the result of a set of curious circumstances, and the magnificent manner in which its organization is being perfected must be very gratifying to those to whom its inception should be credited.

When the management of the St. Louis Trades Display Association were casting about them last year for something new and novel to tickle the insatiable maw of the great public that annually visits St. Louis during the fall festivities, some wild and reckless enthusiast suggested the bringing of a Flambeau Club to St. Louis, and making it the closing climax of the greatest exhibition ever attempted by the Trades Display Association.

The suggestion "caught on," and overtures were at once made to the then prominent clubs of the country, the Atchison and Topeka Flambeau Clubs. The latter was finally billed for the event.

The energy and generosity of the friends of the movement kept pace with its popularity, and a large amount of money was contributed to carry it out in a magnificent manner. All of the athletic societies in the city were invited to take part, and to add a greater feature to the affair, the Atchison Flambeau Club was also invited to participate.

Wednesday, October 8, 1885, during Fair week, the parade took place; and it was a paralyzer, in fact it was the finest display of fire-works ever made in this country, the rivalry between Atchison and Topeka being so great that the former club, having as it did the first parade to make, made the pace so fast that on the following night, when the Topeka Club paraded with the Trades Display Association, although doing a fine piece of work, they appeared to make a complete failure.

After the success of the first display of the Athletic Parade Association it was but natural that a permanent organization be suggested, and at a meeting held at the Elk's club room, soon after, this idea was carried into effect. On October 22, application was made to the Circuit Court for a decree of incorporation of the Athletic Parade Association and St. Louis Flambeau Battalion, and the same was granted, and on November 6th, the Secretary of State issued the certificate for same.

In organizing the Flambeau Battalion, it was thought absolutely necessary to have six companies in it to carry out the plan of work expected from it, and the same were designated, from the duties required of them, the Pike Company, the Flambeau Company, the Roman Candle Company, the Mortar Battery, the Rocket Company and the Rifle Company.

The uniform adopted for the various companies will make a beautiful display.

The uniform of the Pike Company will be green granite-gray coats and light gray pants, with red trimmings, top boots and white helmets. This company will carry long pikes, and will lead the advance of the Flambeau Battalion, clearing the way. The men are the pride of Capt. Mitchell, all of them being over six feet in height.

The second company is the Flambeau, and is uniformed in white duck linen suits and white helmets with old-gold belt, and is assigned to duty on each side of the street, the full length of the procession, marching thirty feet apart. This company handles the flambeaux and sends sheets of chemical flame in any direction fifty or sixty feet, making a grand but harmless display. The company require two wagons to carry their extra flambeaux during the arade.

The next company—the Roman Candle—is also dressed in white linen duck suits, with white helmets and blue belts. Their position in line of march is alternated with the Flambeau Company, on each side of the street, and extending the length of the entire parade. Their work is the firing of Roman candles, torpedoes and other light fire-works and they also have two ammunition wagons in the parade carrying material for their use.

The Mortar Battery which comes next is uniformed in white linen duck suits with red belts and white helmets, and their work is fast and furious from the start to the come-in. The battery is composed of four mortars, and they occupy the center of the parade each mortar being manned by eight men and in command of an officer. From the picture of the mortar wagons, it will be seen how careful the management of the battalion have been in making them strong and safe, and no fears need be entertained of a repetition of the explosions of last year.

The Rocket Company is Company E, and like the other three companies of the fire section, is dressed in white linen duck suits, white helmets, and red, white and red belts. The company is divided into four platoons, which take positions about one hundred feet apart and fire rockets from their peculiar-shaped funnels incessantly during the display. It requires four rocket wagons to carry the necessary rockets for an ordinary procession, each wagon having a capacity of ten dozen. These wagons are very peculiar in construction, and are modeled on the plan of a tubular boiler, each having a separate tube, and making accidents from explosion in moving impossible.

The Rifle Company closes the procession and is faced rearward, keeping back the surging crowd and firing continuous volleys of musketry. They look like veterans, their uniforms being dark blue blouse and light blue pants, with lighter blue trimmings and white.

Some idea can be formed of the grand spectacle that is in store when this great organization appears on our streets, covering, as it will, over three blocks, and having more than 250 men in its ranks, besides about 120 attendants drawing the twelve wagons and serving the ammunition to the men.

The noise is so great from the bursting of bombs, hissing of rockets and firing of muskets that it is impossible to convey orders other than by bugle, and the Major of the battalion will give his commands by bugle note, and the buglers of each company will repeat the same down the line.

By special request of the committee having in charge the Knights Templar Conclave, the Flambeau Battalion has consented to appear during the triennial week; probably the evening of September 24 will be decided on as the night of the Flambeau parade.
